KAISER HENRY'S VOW.

BY HENRY NORMOND.

Saint Henry of Bavaria,
Who wore the German Kaiser Crown,
By Carlo Magno's will and law,
In long succession handed down—
One day, in Verdun's Abbey walls,
In converse with the Prior wise,
Forgot all human needs and calls
And only saw the opening skies.

Upon him like a burthen seemed
The cares and duties of his state;
The crown, for which so many schemed,
Sad ached his temples with its weight,
Within the cloistered pile was peace,
Unbroken by one harsh demand;
And there would thought and conflict cease,
To throbbing head and wearied hand.

Farewell the purple, and at once!
For he who trifles on the road
His duty and his faith attends,
And perils blessings Heaven-bestowed.
Not in the future, but to-day,
With humble pride and lowly scorn.
The Emperor's hand would put away
The crown and scepter thus outworn.

And then, for him, the cassock gray,
The missal and the lonely cell;
The sacred call to rise and pray,
Alone proclaimed by morning bell,
No courts, no pomp, no wrangling peers,
No suffering people's eager cry;
Heaven opening bright to eyes and ears,
With that great boon beyond—to die!

He bade the Prior hear and heed
His sudden but his high resolve,
And serve him, in that special need,
Ere sun should sink, or earth revolve—
To-day to open wide the fold
And take him, like a wanderer, in,
From passion's heat, and sorrow's cold,
From pride, temptation, lust and sin.

"So will I do," the Prior said,
"So must I do, if you require;
For heaven forbid the Church's Head
Should slight one devotee, beau sire!
But are you sure of perfect faith?—
Of perfect will all vows to take,
And keep them, till your day of death
Even the Church's bonds shall break?"

"I am!" the Monarch cried. "If so,
With this the holy task commence;
Vow to the Church, with knee bent low,
The first of all—obedience;
To take all mandates she may give
As strict commands, derived from Heaven,
And in that close obedience live,
With no reserving mental leaven."

The Monarch knelt, and raised his hand:
"I vow, as God, at Judgment Day,
Shall hold me at His blest command,
The Church's simplest word to obey.
So help me, saints and angels all!
So help me, Mary Mother blest!—
And He, on whom my sins must fall,
If ever I behold His rest!"

"'Tis well," the Prior said. "Arise,
And prove obedience, here, and now!
Cast off the mists from blinded eyes,
And see the world with veil-less brow;
Go back and rule your Empire!—rule
Till God, at death, shall set you free
And learn that each is but a fool,
Who measures tasks, save only He!

"What right have you, or I, beau sire,
To leave a work but well begun,
Ere failing health or death require,
Or it is fully, nobly done?
What right could any soldier show,
To flee his post, with pale lip—
Or sailor, when the storm winds blow,
To leave unmanned his perilled ship?

"Go back, and wear the German Crown,
And wear it as aforetime—well;
And leave to others, lowlier down,
The cassock and the convent bell.
So Mother Church her power displays,
And teaches, if by word or rod,
That labor, nobly done, is praise—
Who does his duty, serves his God!"

Saint Henry heard, bowed head, obeyed,
Oh, that the cowards of the world
Could feel old Prior Richard's blade
Against their flimsy fancies hurled!
Then, nobler battles should be fought
Than theirs, on Marathon who bled;
And two would pass from human thought—
The recreant and the suicide.

The adoption of children, writes a correspondent from Rome, which prevails to a considerable extent in America, seems to be extending to Italy. Some thirty years ago a German lady, of rank almost princely, was staying at Albano, and took a fancy to two beggar children—a boy and a girl—of extraordinary beauty. Her Excellence, who had plenty of money, adopted the two brats, and gave them the best possible education. The boy turned out an arrant scamp, and took to evil courses and soon died of dissipation. The girl grew up a model of womanly grace and beauty, and found many admirers, and, among others, a young Roman noble, who won her heart but abused her confidence. The Pope heard of the misconduct of the young nobleman and compelled him to marry the girl on pain of his displeasure. The marriage was accomplished, and the German princess settled her enormous fortune on the married couple. For a few years all went happily, but, alas! the young husband died of fever, leaving his widow with a son of four years old to inherit a large property and a distinguished title. The child of the Albano beggar girl will be one of the richest counts in Rome when he attains his majority.

Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne were waiting on the Sunday school scholars at a recent entertainment given them at Rideau Hall, and the former asked a pretty little girl if she wouldn't take more cake. The little guest declined with awe, and her hostess, fearing that bashfulness was standing in the way, pressed her again. Again she declined. Her highness, struck by the sweet modesty and childlike simplicity of the pretty creature, cut a large slice from the cake and said, "Well, my dear, you must at least take this home as a present from me; let me put it in your pocket." The child hesitated, blushed, and exhibited a decided unwillingness to accept the proffered gift. And the more unwilling she seemed, the more charmed the princess became with her innocent look and blushing diffidence. Using a gentle force, she found the pocket of her young visitor, when, lo! to her infinite astonishment, she discovered that it was already filled to overflowing with cake which this bland little creature had stealthily abstracted from the table, having taken care also to fill herself to the extent that she, too, really could not admit any more.

FAITH.—The following is an incident on the return of some British officers from Afghanistan: Scene—The wildest part of the Khyber, with barren rocks towering on all sides; an English officer riding along, escorted by a motley company of molks and tribesmen all armed to the teeth; more armed Afreedees in the middle distance; a weary, lonely figure toiling on the dusty road in huge black boots, face burned a brick red and fringed by a scanty sandy beard. The figure is clad in a thick wadded garment and has a bundle on its back. "Halt! Who are you?" "A Turkestani." "Where are your comrades?" "I am alone." "Where are you going?" "To Mecca." "How will you get there?" "God will help." "Peace be with you." "And with you." The figure move off, and the armed circle breaks up. This poor devotee had tramped hundreds of miles through hills and valleys, swarming with cut-throats, secure in his simple faith which had led him to leave distant Turkestan in quest of the still more distant Mecca.—Indian Pioneer.

According to Humboldt, the oldest town in the world is Jakutsk, five thousand inhabitants, in Eastern Siberia. It is not only the oldest but probably, also, the coldest. The ground remains always frozen to the depth of three hundred feet, except in a disumfer, when it thaws three feet at the surface. The mean temperature for the year is 13.7° F. For ten days in August the thermometer goes as high as 85°. From November to February the temperature remains between 42° and 68° below zero. The river Lena remains frozen for nine months of the year.

Weather report—Thunder.

THE EGYPTIAN GOVERNMENT.

About three hundred thousand wandering Arabs pay allegiance to the Egyptian Government. These Bedouins are divided into sixty tribes, retaining the nomadic habits and proud independence of Abraham their great progenitor. The tribe, whom Moses, calls Midianites, who guided the Israelites as far as Ezion Geber, are probably the Tor Arabs of Sinai; and the Alawin, dwelling next to them, are probably the hostile Edomites, "who refused to give Israel passage through his border," and compelled the long detour of Mount Hor, and the wanderings of forty years.

Slavery is still very prevalent in Egypt, and its victims are brought from Circassia, Abyssinia, and central Africa. It would scarcely be proper for us as yet to lift our hands in holy horror at this, any more than for the newly-reformed drunkard to denounce the intemperance of moderate drinking. It is yet too soon for us to indulge in pious invectives, against Egyptian slavery. England waited about twenty years after freeing her colonial slaves, before she began very bitterly to inveigh against her sister countries, who had not followed her example; possibly she might still find some things within her empire not very unlike slavery. We cleared our skirts less than twenty years ago, so we ought in the interest of decency wait a little longer before our Pharisaic righteousness shall join in the outcry against others. Besides, slavery in Egypt is not nearly so cruel as ours was. The slave is a member of the family, doing the domestic work only, never working in the fields, and scarcely ever even in the stable or garden. The religion, and still more important, the custom of the country, are strongly in favor of clemency to slaves, and during the present reign much has been done to better their condition. An old religious law entitled a slave who was badly treated to insist on being sold to another master, and the khedive superseded this law by another decreeing complete emancipation for the ill-used slave. The masters for some time evaded this law by bringing counter charges of theft or other offence against any slave who appealed to the courts against them. By this means their servants were generally induced to return to them in preference to enduring the severe punishment of Egyptian justice. To remedy this default, the khedive gave authority to the foreign consuls to examine all cases of alleged ill treatment, and where proved, to demand from the native authorities the plaintiff's manumission.

Egypt is as dependent for her very existence on the waters of the Nile as ever she was. There is not an acre of tilled land but is fertilized directly from the river. The annual rise, caused by the equatorial rains, begins in June and attains its greatest hight in the latter part of September. The country is irrigated by eight hundred and forty-six canals, measuring in all eight thousand four hundred miles, of which one hundred and twelve have been constructed during the present reign. The large canals which issue directly from the river tap it at a higher elevation than the district they are intended to irrigate, and from them issue smaller canals which water still lower and more remote sections.—National Repository.

Emile Zola, the famous French novelist, had a youth of misery. After the death of his father, a distinguished civil engineer, the boy and his mother went to Paris, were they suffered greatly from poverty. Once, says The London World, Emile had to pawn his coat and go home in his shirt-sleeves to get a breakfast. Once he trotted round with visiting-cards on New Year's Day to earn a louis. At length he found a place in a publishing house, Hachette's, in the packing department. He had to make up brown-paper parcels, that was all. In the evenings, after they had put up the shutters, he wrote verses; and, always a highflyer in ambition, this strippling must needs produce a great poem on love. The "Love Comedy," he called it, written on the model of that other comedy, which is called the "Divine." He left this curious commodity in bulk on his employer's desk one night, with a note requesting him to be good enough to say what he thought of it, and he returned next morning, with wistful thumb in mouth, to await the answer. The old gentleman sent for him, said a few kindly words, and put him to better work in the house, in the advertising department. This brought Zola into communication with the journals; the rest is a smooth story.

It is curious to observe how great a change has passed over public opinion in regard to lady physicians. When Miss Jex Blake and her associates stormed at the gates of the University at Edinburgh, a number of worthy people protested as if every sacred institution of society were about to be overthrown. It was known that Mrs. Garrett Anderson and a few other courageous ladies had solved the problem for themselves, and that no particular public disaster had resulted. But this was considered insufficient evidence, and persons interested in the question had to listen to the most doleful prophecies. Outside the medical profession there is now hardly any one who takes this line. The public have become accustomed to the idea, and the more they have considered it the less dangerous has it appeared. Lady practitioners have, in fact, practically demonstrated that there is a sphere for them, a sphere which cannot be so efficiently occupied by men. We should be glad to believe that those who have hitherto monopolized the profession will soon give up their opposition. If they do not, there is some danger that their obstinancy will be set down to some rather less lofty motive than a disinterested regard for the public well-being.

They are laughing heartily in Rome over the love adventure of a young man hardly out of his teens, at one of the carnival balls. Early in the evening he was accosted by a domino, not pink, but white, white satin, adorned with lace. The hair of the unknown was delicately powdered and there was no telling its real color. She had a pretty hand, and her foot, which was not always hidden, was small and neat. Her figure, too, as far as could be guessed beneath the folds of the domino, was slight and supple. He did not know her, but she knew all about him. They flirted desperately, exchanged flowers, and promised to meet again. He went home and dreamed all day of his princess—she must be a princess, or, at least, a duchess. In the afternoon he arouse and went to pay his respects to his mother. Her maid was dressing madame's hair. In the bodice of the maid appeared his rose of the night before and, worse than all, the girl was telling the lady of the fun.

The New York World has compiled a table of the number of persons who were killed or wounded on the Fourth of July in the United States. This list is necessarily only a partial one, but it foots up 18 killed and 107 wounded. A complete list would doubtless more than double the number of wounded and if the number of the wounded who have since died or who will die could be ascertained, the list of fatal cases would probably be doubled. Pistols and firecrackers and the like explosives did this fatal work. The World omits from its list the loss of property and damage to limb resulting from fires started by fireworks. In New York, it says, there were twenty fires due directly to the heathenish style of celebration, and in Philadelphia there were fourteen. In commenting upon this record the Springfield Republican says that down to Bull Run, no battle of the war had cost more men.

How Ohio Came to be Called the Buckeye State.—A correspondent of the Marietta (O.) Register contributes this interesting little chapter of history: "The first settlement in Ohio was made at Marietta, at the junction of the Muskingum with the Ohio, by a body of New England emigrants, forming a part of the Ohio company, an incorporated body presided over by General Rufus Putnam of Massachusetts, assisted by a board of directors composed of gentlemen of integrity and marked ability. General Putnam was a cousin of the Revolutionary hero, Israel Putnam. The company had purchased from the old Congress a large body of land in the southeastern part of the territory, and the mouth of the Muskingum was selected as the site of the first settlement. During the winter of 1787-8 the first instalment of the company's emigrants, numbering forty-three men, were journeying by wagon train from New England to Pittsburgh. In consequence of the impassable condition of the roads over the mountains, caused by heavy snow falls, the wagons were abandoned, and by packhorses the company reached Sumrell's Ferry, thirty miles above Pittsburgh, in the latter part of March. Here the emigrants found a craft somewhat resembling a common flatboat, but with a roof and raking bow, so that it could be used in ascending as well as descending the stream. This craft was named the Mayflower. They had also one flatboat and three large canoes. On this insignificant flatboat forty eight men, the germ of the state of Ohio, with its millions of population, its vast stores of wealth, and its eminent position in our sisterhood of states, embarked for their destination.

"After floating for a few days without any marked incident, about noon on the 7th of April, 1788, the settlers landed on the site of present city of Marietta. Two of them immediately took each his own axe, each wishing to cut the first tree. Neither of them knew the species of the tree selected by him. One attacked a beech, which being a hard wood, the process of felling was slow. The other selected a buckeye, which, being soft, soon came to the ground. And thus, it is affirmed by a family tradition, which during nineteen years has not been contradicted by any history or denied, Ohio came to be called the Buckeye State. The successful competitor in this little contest was Captain Daniel Davis, of Killingly Windham county, Conn. He was my honored grandfather, who, with a somewhat numerous family, spent five years in a private, or neighboring, fortification, called Fort Frye, which was located where the town of Beverly, Washington county, O., now stands. With his eldest two sons he participated in the perils of Indian warfare, with which the settlers were harassed until after General Wayne's victory over the savages of the Northwest in August 1794."

From the New York Evening Post.

WE TWO.

BY MADELINE S. BRIDGES.

Strangers, but a week before
Giving pleasant word for word,
Smile for smile, and nothing more!
Can you tell what took or took
First this turn of feeling stirred?
What strange tremor broke the calm
Of our friendly greeting . . . gave
Such tumultuous, wild delight,
In the meeting of the eyes
And the touch of palm to palm?
All the gladness of good-day,
All the passion of good-night!
Was it, then, a swift surprise
To your soul as to my own?
Did you watch the words, unsaid,
On my lips . . . and dream awake
All the long night, for my sake
Love, in fancy's upper skies,
As the phantom of a kiss?
Was it not enough for years,
Wealth enough, to last to death?
What strong love, beyond control—
What so silent as, soul with soul,
Pulse with pulse, and breath with breath?

One brief meeting at the last,
Once your strong arms round me cast.
Hurried words and burning tears,
Kisses—(ah, how sweeter far
Than the dreams of kisses are!)
Last, good-bye. . . . But no one knew
What we found, and lost—we two!

How to Build up a Town.—It is the duty of every man who lives in a town to use every effort for its encouragement and upbuilding. It is his own home, and self-interest—even if he were indifferent to the public good—should prompt him to such a course. To do otherwise is to attempt suicide. In any event, the man who would persist in defaming and deprecating his own home must be sadly blind to his best interest. Horace Greeley, in commenting on this very subject, insisted that if the town had defects, let the world discover them the best way they could. If it has advantages let them be put forward so prominently that he who runs may read. Advertise its educational facilities, its healthful location, its suitability for manufacturing and commercial enterprises. Patronize every good and worthy home institution. Encourage merchants to bring large and varied stocks of goods to the place by purchasing whatever is needed from them. And right here we would like to say that if you are a teacher in the public schools, or any other public officer, it becomes your bounden duty to always deal at home, because it is from the home merchants and mechanics that a part your salary comes. This rule should always be observed; to do otherwise would be smiting the hand that gives you bread. Patronize your home newspapers, not only indirectly but indirectly, by dealing with those who patronize them. If it is deemed necessary to deal from home, by all means buy from those who advertise in your home papers, for by so doing you lend assistance to a home institution. Reward enterprise and energy whenever possible, discountenance idleness, push the habitual croaker into the background, punish the mischief-maker, foster and encourage every institution that has for its object the elevation of mankind, stand united upon every worthy object, hope for great things, and in due time success cannot fail to crown the efforts put forth.—Exchange.

Four Monarchs.—During the occupation of Paris by the allied troops in 1815, three military gentlemen were walking one morning in the Jardin des Plantes when its beauties were quite scientifically pointed out and described to them by an oddly dressed and singular looking personage, whom they supposed to be one of the under gardeners. He dwelt with peculiar emphasis on the beauties of the Indian trees—the lotus, the palm, the banyan tree, &c.,; and after concluding his botanical survey, he turned to his audience and politely requested the strangers' names.

"I am the Emperor of Russia," said one of the party.

"Indeed! Ah, and this gentleman?"

"He is the Emperor of Austria," was the answer.

"Oh! Must I also understand," pursued the singular querist, "that this gentleman is an Emperor, too?"

"No," replied Frederick William, smiling (who then saw Paris for the first time), "I am simply the King of Prussia. But," continued his Majesty (with a touch of that grave humor which is characteristic of his race), "will you be so good as to tell us in return the name of our distinguished cicerone, to whom we are at present so much indebted?"

"Monsieur, my brother," replied the eccentric botanist; drawing himself up and laying his hand his heart, "Messieurs, my brothers, I am the Grand Mogul!"

Alexander of Russia, who frequently told the story, afterwards used to add that the Great Mogul, who was simply a harmless lunatic, once a distinguished botanist, was probably the happiest monarch of the four.

Never look a gift apple in the worm hole.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A lady who was suffering under a slight indisposition told her husband that it was with the greatest difficulty she could breathe, and the effort distressed her exceedingly. "I wouldn't try, my dear!" he soothingly responded.

An old woman who went into the poultry business, thinking she could make a fortune by selling eggs, gave it up in disgust, because, as she said, "the hens'll never lay when eggs is dear, but allus begins as soon as they're cheap.

At a religious conference recently held in London, it was stated that the wages paid to women engaged in producing tenpenny Bibles were not enough to keep body and soul together, and that of three recent strikes in the bookbinding trade all had arisen out of Bible work.

In Vienna, the fashionable jewelry is pig. Scarf pins, watch charms, bracelets, stick handles, everything must be pig. The idea came from Germany, and was introduced there to commemorate the escape of the Emperor William from all his trouble, and his "Schweins's gluck," or pig's luck, meaning splendid luck, as the Germans have it.

"And how does Charley like going to school?" kindly inquired a good man of the little six-year-old boy who was waiting with a tin can in hand the advent of another dog. A boy had always declined to eat oatmeal, although his mother had urged it upon him as a strengthening diet. Suddenly he surprised her by one morning eating a liberal plateful and calling for more. When she asked for an explanation he replied: "I am bound to eat oatmeal till I get strong enough to whip Georgy Scott."

Fred Douglass said in a recent lecture: "It is a mistake for the negro to move North; one of the most unfortunate predicaments that can be imagined is a negro in a snow bank; it don't look right, the colors don't blend harmoniously." In an out-of-the-way town in New Hampshire lives an eccentric old farmer who found his cellar stairs hard to climb on account of the height of the steps. After careful consideration he hit upon the device of nailing a piece of two-inch plank on each, in order, as he said, to "bring 'em nearer together;" and contended that he noticed 'a feetle tetch of improvement."

About a week ago an Iowa man died. He was very wealthy and left three sons, his only heirs, and would you believe it, the ungrateful boys got together and ran away with all the property before the lawyers could get at it and divide it with each other? There is so much sordid, mean, grasping selfishness in this world, that sometimes it is enough to discourage a good lawyer.

Tennyson's early poem, "Lover's Tale," just published, contains about eleven hundred lines. A pretty long tale to pour into her ear, and he must have gone to see her at least three nights a week for a year. When he left, at 2 A. M. Monday, he would tie a string around her finger so she would remember where he left off, and whisper in her ear, as he kissed her good-night, "To be continued on Tuesday evening."—Norristown Herald.

General C. W. Darling, of Utica, has in his possession the original manuscripts and records of correspondence between President Washington and the Earl of Buchan, in 1792. At that time the Earl of Buchan sent to President Washington a box elegantly mounted with silver, and made of the oak which sheltered Sir William Wallace. President Washington, in return, sent the earl his portrait, painted by Archibald Robinson, one of the most celebrated painters of that day, and afterward bequeathed to the earl this relic in his will. This interesting correspondence will shortly be published in the Historical Magazine, and will prove a valuable contribution to our historical literature.

—William Allen, ex-Governor of Ohio, and formerly a member of Congress, died suddenly at his home near Chillicothe, on Friday morning, aged seventy-two.

—The electric light has been introduced in the Nevada silver mines. It enables the miners to work with as much facility as if they had the use of sunlight.

—Salem, North Carolina, a small town, has shipped during three years over three million pounds of dried blackberries, for which it received $50,000.

—It is said that the Whitaker will case has led to the invention of a new instrument, or rather the new application, of an old instrument which makes certain the discovery of forged writings. It is called a megascope.

—The New Orleans Democrat says that a few days ago between twenty and thirty negroes left East Baton Rouge to put in their claim for "de bundud and sixty acres, de mule and de lumber for a house, wid de carpenter to buil' it."

—A testatrix in Germany left her money to her brothers and sisters, but added: "If brother William marries in his old age, he shall have nothing." Legal experts hold that William, a robust sexagenarian, can receive nothing, as until his death it cannot be known whether he marries or not.

—Senator Windom's challenge to the Democrats to prove that any one of the thirty-three Democratic investigating committees has shown that a Republican has stolen a dollar from the public treasury is still unanswered. Such a fact is wholly without a parallel in the history of governments.

—The Cincinnati Commercial some time ago contained a list of all the ministers in the United States convicted of immoralities and the number is just fifty. In other words, out of 65,000 ministers in the country, fifty, or one thirteenth of one per cent. have been guilty of known immoralities.

—An Ohio idea is a "Society for the Promotion of Matrimony." It was organized at Cincinnati in 1877, and its managers claim that since that time more than two thousand marriages have occurred through its agency. It is to have a grand pic nic August 10, when one hundred weddings will form a suggestive feature of the occasion.

—Mr. Worth, of New Harrison Wis., was a remarkable handsome young man. He was engaged to marry Miss Dakin, a wealthy girl. She pointed what she thought was an empty pistol at him, and shot him in the face, disfiguring him terribly. She now refuses to keep the engagement, saying that such an ugly husband would make her constantly nervous.

—Santa-Cruz, California, has a gallant baby. A little two-year old girl was playing with a three and a-half year old boy near the water's edge, when a breaker carried the little girl out into it. The manly little fellow went immediately into the water to the rescue and saved his companion, to the admiration of those who witnessed the scene.

—The tramp laws of the various States surrounding New York, mainly modeled upon the New Hampshire statue, have apparently had the effect of driving those vagrants into that State as a safe harbor. Gov. Robinson failed to approve the tramp law passed by the New York Legislature last winter, and the tramps are taking advantage of it. The Pennsylvania law goes into effect August 15.

—Sarah Bernhardt has just taken London by storm, and will of course make a similar easy conquest of America, for she is coming. Nobody undertakes to analyze or even to describe Bernhardt's power. She is not beautiful, they say, and yet she is "strangely attractive." Her features (her eyes especially) enchain the spectator at once, and her slight frail, delicate figure only heightens the wonder of her power and intensity.

—The Greenback party of Pennsylvania held its convention at Altoona on Tuesday. The gathering was a small one, many counties not being represented. The utterances in the platform on financial puestions are milder than usual. Henry Carey Baird was nominated for State Treasurer, but sent a telegram positively declining to run. Ex-Judge Peter Sutton, of Indiana County, was then nominated.

—David Liebearknecht, of York county, Pa., recently suffered from a singular cause. A bee entered one of his ears, and although it would occasionally work its way out so far as to be seen, all methods adopted to eject it proved unavailing; finally, smoking a cigar was proposed, and, by closing the nose and forcing the smoke down the throat into the eustachian tubes that connect with the head, it had the desired effect to drive the troublesome insect out.

—William E. Chandler has been giving a reporter of The Washington Star a liberal dose of his opinions on the political outlook. He believes the Democrats will renominate Tilden, though Hancock would run better. On the Republican side he is sure the candidate will not be Grant, as he cannot afford to scramble for the nomination. If Grant does not have at least two-thirds of the delegates pledged to him he will not go before the convention. Mr. Chandler does not think he will have half the delegates. Personally, he is for Blaine. The politicians will kill Sherman off, and if the contest gets down to a bitter one a negative man like Washburne or Zach Chandler may be taken up. He finds a decided sentiment among the people in favor of Chandler, and he thinks the Republican party could go further and fare worse. Thus, William E. differs radically from Zachariah, for Zachariah says it is absurd to speak of himself as a candidate, and that Grant is sure to be

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 15th, 1879.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—We had a pleasant chat recently with Senator Voorhees of Indiana, upon the approaching election in Ohio. He is very confident of Ewing's success, and said that were an election held to-day, his majority would be sweeping, for the people are fully alive to the issue of the day, and to the absolute necessity for reform and the ousting of the Republican party from power. But, he said, I am aware of the vicissitudes of politics, and it is possible the current which has set in so strongly towards Ewing, may change its course, and defeat, the result. The Tall Sycamore of the Wabash, never uttered a sager oracle than this, and his wisdom like that of Billy Barlows may be summed up in the latter's wise saying "It mount and again it moutn't. Mr. Voorhees is the only Democrat we have met who permits any contingency to enter into the Ohio canvass, for all like Stillson Hutchens, that embodiment of wisdom which edits the Daily Post, insist that Charley Foster can't possibly win, and that Ewing in carrying Ohio gives his party a passport to the White House next year, consequently all are as happy as so many clams, over the prospect. On the other hand our Republican friends are equally jubilant for all advices point conclusively to Foster's election, and that there is cause for apprehension of loss through ever confidence.

Portland, Oregon, gives us a straw to show which way the wind is blowing now, by electing Hon. D. P. Thompson as its Mayor. As this city has been strongly Democratic, and was the grand centre for Democratic manipulations at the hands of Glover and his birds of prey for years past, the election of Gov. Thompson to the Mayoralty, shows that he, if not the party, has strength enough to win on a "square deal." Gov. Thompson went from Ohio to Oregon about 25 years ago a penniless boy, and has by his pluck and brains worked his way up from poverty's walk to immense wealth as well as to the head and front of the Republican party in that State. The Portland Standard (Dem.) says of him, "He knows no defeat in anything." We predict that this characteristic of the Gov. by which he was able to carry Portland, will extend to the State, and that Oregon will fall into the Republican column in 1880 "by a large majority."

There are most painful rumors here in circulation, that Senator Edmunds health is so broken as to prevent him from future work in the Senate. This, if it prove to be the fact, would be indeed a calamity, for the future has great need for him in it as he is the master mind of the Republican party in Congress. The ablest lawyer in the Senate, his judgment upon measures is that of the highest court for his party, and to lose him now that the whole Democratic party brigadiers and all are charging upon the defences which the Republicans have erected since 1861 for the preservation of the country, is to lose our most trusted leader and we can but hope he may return next December from his European tour so invigorated as to take his place at the front of the mortal national battle to be fought next winter in Congress. The extra session, just ended, bad as it was for the country is but the merest beginning of what the Democracy will attempt when they meet again, hence the need of all our leaders at their posts.

The Confederate Blue Bloods of the South tells us that the aristocrats of their section have none of their shortcomings of human nature, which exhibits themselves among plebeians as a consequence of the social equality notions and of the lack of that noble blood which makes the "Southrons" the superior people, yet with all their blather about inferiority we plebians occasionally witness something which inclines us to think, though we don't dare say it aloud in these fighting days that human nature may perchance be as weak among aristocrats as among mudsills.

A Miss Horton has come here from Alabama to enter suit against the son of Senator Morgan of that State for seduction and breach of promise of marriage. She has engaged three of our ablest lawyers, and evidently means business. Her father before his death was Senator Morgan's law-partner and she alleges that young Morgan took advantage of her youth, being only 17 years of age at the time, to accomplish her ruin, under promise of marriage. Ordinarily such a suit would attract only local notice, but as it arises among the class whose assumption has always been that its women never fall, though poor white trash do, we hereby chronicle the matter for the edification of your plebeian readers. D. D.

—Bathing dresses have undergone very little change. It has become an established fact that flannels of heavy make are the materials which can be most satisfactory used. If there is a desire to have them a little fanciful, there are many ways of rendering them so. The blouse can be trimmed with longitudinal rows of white mohair braid, set on closely together; or the edges can be trimmed with braided patterns in white Russia braid. White flannel with patterns of blue worked in chain-stitch with worsted is very pretty. Since bathing scenes have become a sort of exhibition, an excellent garment has been devised for ladies called "peignoirs de bain," which is thrown over the bathing dress in going to and from the water. It is easy made and is inexpensive. Russia toweling is made into a large loose cloak, with sleeves and a hood; the edges are finished with badds of bright colored work done with worsteds, or else striped Russia toweling is used with the edges plainly hemmed. It is easy dried for every day use.

—An absent-minded rector disappointed a fashionable marriage party in Philadelphia last week. He was to have married the couple at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The bride and bridegroom appeared, followed by a retinue of ushers. Everything was in readiness except the gentleman who was to perform the ceremony. A messenger was dispatched to his residence, but the rector had gone out of town. After a delay of over an hour it was learned that he had gone botanizing. A Presbyterian clergyman in the audience volunteered, entered the chancel and married the couple.

—A Presbyterian minister in Colorado has within a year organized two churches, built one house of worship and a parsonage, bought a church organ, established two Sunday Schools and three prayer-meetings, taught three catechism classes and supplied —By the fortunate interception of a letter from one convict to another in the State Prison at Concord, Mass., on Friday, a plot for a wholesale release of the prisoners was discovered. The plan was to seize, at a given signal, upon three officers who had charge of two workshops, where one hundred and fifty convicts are employed, take possession of their revolvers, and thus release the men in these shops. Then the men in the other shops were to be at once communicated with, and thus the entire prison was to be emptied. Once out of the shops; the next step was to seize the railroad train which backs into the prison yard every day for freight, and use it as a battering-ram for the gates, thus opening the way for all. There is a feeling within and without that the prison is insecure, and the convicts know that once outside their chances of escape are good, as the country around the prison is thickly wooded and sparsely settled.

—The Cincinnati Gazette has been endeavoring, for more than a month, to learn whether Dr. Luke P. Blackburn, the present Democratic candidate for Governor of Kentucky, and the gentleman of that name and title who, during the rebellion, endeavored to introduce yellow fever into the North and among Northern soldiers, are one and the same person. The Gazette has pressed the question upon the Democratic editors of Kentucky every week, and several times a week ever since Blackburn's nomination, but up to this time they have refused to answer. They growl and say all the mean things they can think of to and of the Gazette, but utterly refuse to say yes or no to the question asked. People out of that State will be very apt to conclude that there is and has been but the one Luke P. Blackburn.

—Although there are undoubted evidences that New Jersey, from the Delaware to the present coast line, as far up the river as Trenton, was covered by the sea, it was at a very remote period—thousands of years ago. In sinking an artesian well at Cape May, some time ago, it was proven that the ocean at three different periods covered that locality. The ordinary sea-sand was found at a depth of over one hundred feet, and cedar logs in good condition were struck and bored through at eighty-seven feet below the present surface of the ground. There may be no change in the coast in that vicinity for many years to come, as precautions are taken to prevent the encroachments of the sea.

—The Democratic State Convention of Pennsylvania met at Harrisburg yesterday. There was a notable absence of the leaders of the party. Mr. Coffroth was made president of the Convention; his speech was only two minutes long. There was a contending delegation from Philadelphia, but it made no fight at the proper moment, and it displayed such weak tactics that it was ruled out on a point of order and left in disgust. Mr. D. O. Barr was nominated for State Treasurer. A platform was adopted containing a very brief plank on finance, but denouncing strenuously the President and his vetoes, and the National Election laws. No one made a speech.

—John A. Smull, who has been for years Resident Clerk of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, was, at seven o'clock on last Thursday morning, found dead in bed in the Girard House, Philadelphia. From his general appearance the impression is that heart disease was the cause. He came to Philadelphia a few days ago, and as far as can be learned, was in the best of health and spirits when he retired. In the morning a servant went to call him, and receiving no answer forced the door open. He went in to arouse him, and to his horror discovered him to be past waking—he was dead.

—It is estimated that the Whitaker estate, now in controversy on account of an alleged forged will, will not realize more than six or seven hundred thousand dollars, instead of two or three millions; also, that instead of there being only three or four heirs there are twenty six nephews and nieces. The death of the widow, who had been willed one-half of the personal estate, will give the whole to these heirs, who then will inherit only about $27,000 each. But Mrs. Whitaker left an estate of her own of about $500,000, subject to her own disposal, but how she has done it is not yet known.

—A Presbyterian church was organized at Asbury Park last week, L. F. Le Chevalier, of Ocean Grove, being chosen elder, with Messrs. Wright and Lippincott as deacons. Rev. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton, preached an effective sermon on the occasion. The church was organized on petition of about forty-five permanent residents of Asbury Park to the Presbytery of Monmouth. Fifteen persons were received by letter and one by profession. Several persons were prevented from joining by not receiving their letters in time.

—The Cincinnati Board of Education has passed resolutions demanding that none but teachers of the highest intellectual qualifications and the purest morals be employed, and ordering the consideration by a special committee of the propriety of striking out of the rules concerning the employment and compensation of teachers all discrimination as to sex, leaving the Board at liberty to employ the best obtainable talent—be it masculine or feminine—for all departments of the schools.

—No more kisses will be thrown to the winds as the trains trundle along the eastern division of the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad. Superintendent Hill has issued an order prohibiting brakemen on the trains from flirting with young women along the line of the road. It is said the order was issued on the complaint of an Orange County farmer, who sent the Superintendent a letter alleging that the brakemen threw kisses to his pretty daughter.

—The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad rolling-mill, at Reading, has lately been busy in making a large quantity of iron rails for Brazilian railroads. During the past three months as many as 1300 tons have been made there. These rails are each thirty feet long and weigh forty-five pounds to the yard, being considerably longer and lighter than those in use on the Reading road.

—A Fort Valley, Pa., young lady refused to marry her betrothed the other day, after preacher and friends had arrived to witness the ceremony. —A stone jail, twelve feet by twelve and sixteen feet high, is being built on the Spiritualist's camp meeting ground at Neshaminy Falls Grove. The camp will open on the 18th instant. Piles of lumber are now strewn about the place, and several hundred tents are going up. A large platform one hundred feet long and one hundred feet wide, is taking shape.

—A warning to jurymen comes comes from Des Moines, Iowa. William McKensil disappeared mysteriously last January from the home of Thomas L. Hahn, on whose farm he was employed. Hahn was tried several times for the supposed murder, and barely escaped lynching. Last Wednesday McKensil turned up alive and well at Polk City, Iowa.

—Sara Bernhardt, the French actress, artist, sculptor and writer, is creating a great sensation in London. Prince Leopold has purchased the largest of her pictures—a Spanish beauty selling palm leaves. Sara has four children, but there is nothing said about M. Bernhardt, though doubtless there is one, who is a good nurse and a liberal dispenser of his wife's earnings.

—Sunstroke is caused by excessive heat, and especially if the weather is "muggy." It is more apt to occur on the second, third or fourth day of a heated term than on the first. Loss of sleep, worry, excitement, close sleeping rooms, debility, abuse of stimulants, predispose to it. It is more apt to attack those working in the sun, and especially between the hours of eleven o'clock in the morning and four o'clock in the afternoon. On hot days wear thin clothing. Have as cool sleeping rooms as possible. Avoid loss of sleep and all unnecessary fatigue. If working in doors, and where there is artificial heat—laundries, etc., see that the room is well ventilated. If working in the sun, wear a light hat (not black, as it absorbs heat), straw, etc., and put inside of it on the head a wet cloth or a large green leaf; frequently lift the hat from the head and see that the cloth is wet. Do not check perspiration, but drink what water you need to keep it up, as perspiration prevents the body from being overheated. Have whenever possible an additional shade, as a thin umbrella, when walking, a canvas or board cover when working in the sun. When much fatigued do nothing to work, but be excused from work, especially after 11 o'clock in the morning on very hot days, if the work is in the sun. If a feeling of fatigue, dizziness, headache or exhaustion occurs, cease work immediately, lie down in a shady and cool place; apply cold cloths to and pour cold water over head and neck. If any one is overcome by the heat, send immediately for the nearest good physician. While waiting for the physician give the person cool drinks of water or cold black tea, or cold coffee, if able to swallow. If the skin is hot and dry, sponge with or pour cold water over the body and limbs, and apply to the head pounded ice wrapped in a towel or other cloth. If there is no ice at hand, keep a cold cloth on the head, and pour cold water on it as well as on the body. If the person is pale, very faint, and pulse feeble let him inhale ammonia for a few seconds, or give him a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in two table-

The West Indian charade of last week, has been guessed by a grown person. The answer is "Stonewall." The second charade is given below.

A Charade.

MY FIRST.

The mightiest things on earth are we,
Of which man e'er has heard;
He must one have to live at all,
So, too, must beast and bird,
A complicated mystery,
Which never was quite understood,
Though felt in every age.

MY SECOND.

For me men sigh for me men toil,
For me too oft they sin;
They seek me for their outward selves,
They seek me too within;
But I, a wayward sprite, am I,
Too oft they strive in vain,
And softest down, nor fullest purse,
The wished for me obtain.

MY WHOLE.

Summer is come, and we too come,
To smile on the earth once more;
Tell to me one of my many names,
That the children babble o'er,
And may he who guesses that name aright,
And who loves myself right well,
Ever have that priceless boon of heaven,
Which that little name doth tell.

☞ A bright and beautiful child shows in its very expression that its Babyhood was not associated with Opium, cordials, etc.,—for the continued use of Opium is antagonistic to health. That valuable and highly recommended remedy for the disorders of Babyhood, Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is absolutely free from Morphia and all other dangerous agents, and can be safely employed at all times. Price 25 cents.

—The cultivation of pine-apples is one of the chief industries of the Bahama Islands. As many as 1,500,000 pounds of this fruit have been exported from a single farm.

☞ A FOOL ONCE MORE.—"For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff. Six months ago I saw a U. S. flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Such folly pays.—H. W., Detroit, Mich.

—Both the Delaware and Hudson and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Companies at New York, have issued circulars advancing the price on all grades of coal ten cents per ton.

☞ AN OLD DOCTOR'S ADVICE.—It was this: "Trust in God and keep your bowels open." For this purpose many an old doctor has advised the habitually costive to take Kidney-Wort—for no other remedy so effectually overcomes this condition, and that without the distress and griping which other medicines cause. It is a radical cure for piles.

—Mrs. Francis D. Ross, a wealthy lady, was sitting in her carriage in front of her residence in New York, on Wednesday, when she suddenly dropped dead. She was sixty-four years old.

☞ WATER IS FREE.—That's so, but in most patent medicines you pay for it at the rate of a dollar a pint, Kidney-Wort is a dry compound and one package is enough to make six quarts of medicine without addition of any poisonous liquors. It is nature's remedy for Kidney-Diseases, Liver complaint and Piles, for it both diuretic and cathartic, tonic healing.

—Governor Hoyt, has allowed the "Justice of the Peace Act" to become a law without his signature. This allows 'squires to have cognizance in all debts of $300 and under, and to be decided by a jury of six.

☞ BUTTER MAKERS.—Must exercise great care through the hot weather to keep up the standard quality. When the pastures begin to dry up and butter gets light colored use Wells, Richardson & Co's Perfected Butter Color. It will enable you to get the top price in market.

—Miss Grace Daggett, the granddaughter of President Daggett, of Yale, and a lady of ninety years, witnessed from a balcony the Fourth of July procession at New Haven. Later in the day she was formally serenaded.

☞ AFTER you have tried nearly everything to get cured of Chronic Chills and Fever or Fever and Ague in vain, we would advise you to try Dr. F. Wilhoft's Anti-Periodic or Fever and Ague Tonic. It is not pleasant to take, but it contains no Quinine, and never fails to cure. Its composition is printed on the inside wrapper of each bottle, and it is indorsed by the most eminent physicians. For sale by all Druggists.

—Louis Schlacter, a Buffalo butcher, on Wednesday threw a knife at Peter Miller, a butcher's boy inflicting a wound from which he bled to death. Miller and others had aggravated Schlacter in different ways, finally throwing at him a piece of liver which struck him in the face.

☞ Farmers, go to Bristol Machine Works for repairs of all kinds of farming machinery.

—The disgraceful spectacle of a base ball match between eighteen variety actresses in trousers and blouses attracted 3,000 people at Philadelphia. When the game was called there were about a hundred men on the home base, two of the women fainted, the police were overpowered and the bats were in the hands of a drunken mob. The match was a farce of the noisiest kind.

☞ The Bristol Machine Works of E. L. & H. B. Banes have the agency of all kinds of farming implements.

☞ E. C. Neidt & Co., will never become satisfied until they have introduced their Oleine Soap into every ship that leaves port, so in case they should get wrecked there will be some hopes of their being washed ashore.

☞ The largest and best assortment of Wall papers, New York and Philadelphia styles, in Bristol, also a choice selection of window shades. Window shades made and hung from 75 cents to $1.50. W. GRACE, Cedar Street, between Walnut and Franklin Streets, Bristol, Pa.

☞ Dr. C. P. ROSE: Dear Sir.—A severe attack of Cholera Morbus was effectually cured by using your Carminative Balsam, and I have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best remedy I have ever taken.

The Whole of our stock will be found to be marked very, very low.

THE GREAT ALTERATION SALE

NOTES.

—The camp meeting at Ocean Grove begins to morrow

—Most of the school teachers are away on their summer vacations

—There are already quite a number of Bristol people at Ocean Grove

—In the absence of night police a vigilance committee might find work to do

—A Weir Gilkeson has returned home from a few weeks sojourn in New York State

—The Knights of Pythias go on an excursion to Rockaway Beach on the 4th of next month

—The excursion of the Methodist and Baptist churches to Ocean Grove occurs next Thursday

—The trade in water lilies is not very brisk, although numerous urchins are engaged in the traffic

—The thermometers reached 102 degrees in the shade yesterday, and didn't exert themselves much either

—Harry Shoemaker, teacher of the Tullytown grammar school, has accepted a position on the Cape May Railroad.

—The Red men are trying to make arrangements for enjoying the salt breezes of Atlantic City sometime in August

—Instead of rigging up new halliards to the flag staff, would it not be wise to take it down before it blows down and damages the property around it

—The vane on the Town House is to be fixed or taken down, but nobody desires the building fixed up, and few expect to enjoy the pleasure of seeing it taken down very soon

—Although there are not a few Bristolians away from town, on tours in various parts of the country, it is thought advisable not to mention their names for fear burglars will note their absence and act accordingly

—Some Bristol people will visit the Spiritualists' Camp Meeting at Neshaminy Falls Grove, Messrs George W Buck and Henry Blake among the number The latter desires to show his spiritualist friends the error of their ways

—A Bristol lady who went to the mountains to search for cool weather returned home this week convinced that there is no place like home for comfort, even when the thermometer gets excited and jumps up among the hundreds

—On Saturday, July 26 the Union Sunday School connected with the Advent Church at the Wheat Sheaf, will hold their annual celebration and picnic in Scott's Woods In the evening they will adjourn to the church grove

—The young ladies who were active last Fall in managing a fair for charitable purposes, have taken time by the forelock and rented the rooms next to the Times office, to receive contributions for a fair they propose to hold next October

—Joshua D Bond, a colored man, who was quite prominent among the colored Free Masons, of Philadelphia, died in Bristol, and was buried on Sunday at the Episcopal graveyard. It is said he is the first colored man ever buried in those grounds

—Camp Meeting season has arrived There will be a number in this vicinity The one at Chester Heights began on Tuesday, on the 29th inst, one will commence at Langhorne Park, and to morrow the Spiritualist camp meeting at Neshaminy Falls Grove begins.

—A grand excursion to Cape May upon the steamboat Republic will take place from Bristol, Florence, Penn Valley, and other places between here and Philadelphia on July 30. The John A Warner will take the excursionists from the above points and transfer them to the Republic.

—The four pedestrians, Prof Kirchbaum and party, arrived at Ocean Grove last Friday morning. Their trips was comparatively uneventful, except that they came nearly getting lost among the numerous cross roads of Jersey They are expected home to day or to morrow

—On the Fourth of July a sail boat was left tied up along the river bank, and as no one appeared to claim it, Mr. A L Packer took charge of it. A man from Philadelphia came to Bristol on Monday, saw the boat, claimed it, and having proved his claim well founded, Mr Packer turned the boat over to him. It had been borrowed without the owners consent, sailed up to Bristol and left here until reclaimed

—Last Sunday's Philadelphia Times informs us that, in accordance with the wishes of a majority of the people, the Bristol School Board reduced the salaries of the teachers about ten per cent, and the salary of the principal from $60 to $50 per month The School Directors will be as surprised to learn that they reduced Prof Kirchbaum's salary to $50 as the latter will to learn that his salary last year was $50 per month

—A batteau belonging at Burlington, was hired by a man last week who brought the boat to Bristol and tied it to one of the wharves and left it, and went down the river on the Columbia The owner not having received any hire for his boat, and not hearing anything of either it or the man, came over to look for it. He found it in charge of George L. Horn Jr, and returned home rejoicing.

—The loss at the Baptist Parsonage by the recent robbery, has not yet been fully ascertained No silverware except that mentioned last week was taken, as the most valuable articles were removed from the house by Mr [illegible] away. A suit of clothes, a spring overcoat, some silk dresses, and [illegible] were stolen, but until a thorough examination is made the whole loss will not be [illegible]

Council Proceedings

Council met on Monday evening All the members were in their places when the Burgess called the meeting to order The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and after being amended were approved

The Street Committee reported that a trunk had been put in at the Otter street school house to remedy the defect in drainage and some needed work on Swain and Mifflin streets The report was accepted The Finance Committee presented a report, in which the bills of the Assessors of the First and Third Wards, were recommended not to be paid, as the bills exceeded the appropriation made for the purpose The report was, after some explanation, remarks of Mr Scheide accepted The Fire Committee reported that Messrs Hale & Kilbourne had been notified in regard to the desks recently furnished to Council, and agreed to put them in order, but would not exchange them that the contractors who did the work upon the building of Fire Company No 1 had been instructed to do what was needed to perfect their work that the doors of the Hook and Ladder Company's building had been examined, and, although the doors needed repairing they recommend that the company should have the work done, and let the expense come out of the annual appropriation made to the Company, and if the appropriation was not large enough, it ought to be increased, and that Thomas B Harkins had been instructed to have the heater removed from the building of the Fire Company The Corporation Counsel gave as his opinion, in regard to the power of the borough to require bonds from corporations, as security against damage done by digging up the streets, that the question was one upon which the law was not entirely clear The legislature has the power in the matter, as for instance if a charter were granted for building a railroad through any of the streets, that is unless the Bristol Gas Company or the Bristol Water Company should object, that their pipes or property would be injured thereby The Bristol Gas Company is under no restrictions in the matter, but the Bristol Water Company is required to leave the streets, with regard to grade and the safety of the travelling public, in as good condition after digging up the streets as before Since these two companies were willing to do this Mr Gilkeson did not see the necessity of doing more than in the future requiring all corporations to take out a permit when they wished to dig up the streets so that the Council could see whether the streets so operated upon were left in good condition If any damage were caused through the work done, a suit for damages could be instituted

The Committee appointed to investigate charges made by Mr Hoguet in the following letter to the Bristol Weekly Times

"Editor Bristol Weekly Times—DEAR SIR —The report of the Council proceedings, published in your columns last week copied from the BUCKS COUNTY GAZETTE of May 15 1879, is about as correct and fair a statement as can be expected from a paper that is owned and run by the clique who are now chagrined to find their occupation gone, and their inability any longer to run the Borough and Council in their own interest as they have heretofore done The paper which they say was passed around by me was merely a statement of the borough's liabilities and resources, prepared by myself for my own use, and was not handed to any one until I was asked for it On some future occasion I may have something more to say on the subject

Yours, truly, L A HOGUET"

made a report entirely exonerating Messrs Peirce and Scheide, as there was not the slightest evidence presented to the Committee to sustain the charges The report was accepted, and the Committee discharged

The following bills were passed

The bill of Hale & Kilbourne for desks and furniture for Council chamber for $353 was presented and passed, with instruction that an order be drawn for the same, when the desks were put in complete order

Mr Fenton called attention to the condition of the halliards at the flag staff at the corner of Mill and Radcliffe streets The Street Committee was instructed to attend to the matter, and also examine the pole and ascertain if it is sound The same committee was authorized to have the vane on the Town House either straightened or taken down

William Foster, who was wrongfully assessed with a dog, was granted a remit of the dog tax

An appropriation of $20 for stationery for the use of Council and Borough Treasurer was made.

John W Bailey, having obtained permission from Council, called attention to the filthy character of an alley between Lafayette street and Jefferson Avenue, and the railroad and Pond street The Burgess likewise alluded to the alley back of Dorrance street The matter was discussed briefly, Mr Scheide saying that no permanent benefit would be obtained until a proper system of sanitary drainage is established for the whole town The Nuisance Committee was instructed to look into the evil There being no further business, the meeting adjourned.

—Last Saturday Jonathan Thomas, one of the leading business men of this section of the county, died The deceased in partnership with his brother, under the firm name of J & E Thomas, conducted a flourishing business at Torresdale, consisting of a flour mill, saw mill, lumber and coal yard and extensive farming operations After the death of Samuel Thomas the Torresdale property was sold, and the partnership dissolved Jonathan then purchased the well known Dunks Ferry tract of Mr. Hummel Here was laid the foundation for an extensive lumber and coal business, having associated with him Mr Charles S Vandegrift, Jr, and more recently his brother Edward About one year ago, while superintending the piling of lumber, Mr Thomas was effected by the extreme heat, from which it [illegible] he never recovered The [illegible] of his [illegible] the [illegible]

OUR CITY FATHERS.

EDITOR GAZETTE —There seems to be a disposition in almost every community to suppress freedom of speech, there are those who seem to lose sight of the fact that we cannot compel uniformity of opinion on all subjects, and more especially on matters pertaining to the general interests of society Freedom of discussion, and large liberty of thought, is man's birth right in for our form of Government It is an evidence of narrow mindness, when efforts are made to suppress a free expression of sentiment

Every citizen as well as every member of society should feel that what effects the community for weal or woe effects him individually

When this feeling prevails a general interest will be manifested and a united effort will be made to promote the approval and prosperity of the place

In almost every community there are ample resources which men of skill wisdom, force and influence will very soon develope and this should always be considered when men are selected to occupy positions of trust

It is not unfrequently the case that men are appointed or elected without regard to qualifications A Justice of the Peace may be quarrelsome in nature and disposition, ignorant of both the law and the Gospel

Men are sent to make laws who are themselves law breakers, men are often placed in positions of trust with power to act, who are dishonest, selfish and sensual

The moral sense of the community is shocked at the promises made and broken in all the various positions and relations of life

Oaths of members of Congress and of public officers are taken and sometimes as readily violated, secret societies administer oaths, solemn obligations and exact promises which are very soon forgotten The present unsettled condition of affairs in our Borough Council as currently reported through the press throw a fearful responsibility upon our City Fathers I suppose every member of the Council is bound by a solemn oath to discharge his duty faithfully, and should therefore take a deep interest in whatever tends to the growth and promotion of the interest of the borough Every member should therefore be upright and unswerving as to duty The duty of Council is to administer public affairs and in the exercise of these respective functions they should demonstrate to the utter and absolute conviction of every citizen that they are honestly endeavoring to promote the general good in every vote cast, and in every action performed and having discharged duty faithfully, never showing insincerity or inconsistency by any future acknowledgment as has already appeared, if no error exists in the report of Council Conscience may be educated to utterly disregard the solemn engagements entered into Personal feelings prejudices or selfish motives may prompt action which will reflect discredit upon the person and prove an absolute injury to the best interests of a community

Can we not have reports of the good accomplished in our borough, in place of the continuous personal attacks made upon individual members of Council As a citizen and tax payer desirous of no office, and entirely neutral on all questions of controversy, I would suggest that no quiet is ever to be put upon the continual jingling of matters unimportant, but positively injurious that the Council by common consent be disbanded, and let the people engage in a free, honest open fight for equal rights and borough privileges W C HENDRICKSON

—Jesse L Stackhouse, of Emilie, died last Thursday He was a prominent Mason and citizen Last summer he visited Europe in company with the Allegheny Commandery of Pittsburgh, and only last week attended a reunion of the excursionists, where he was made vice president He was always of an enterprising disposition, as was shown by his building operations His homestead was always noticeable for its neatness and order He held the office of Justice of the Peace for more than a quarter of a century, and held many important trusts He has been the general executor and administrator of estates for that section For many years he held the office of School Director, and was the Secretary of the Board For about twenty years he filled the office of Treasurer of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Philadelphia and Bucks counties His funeral was very largely attended by his many friends He was buried at the M E Church at Emilie After the reading of the burial service of the Church by Rev Mr Alcorn, the Masonic Lodge of Bristol of which he was a member, took charge of the remains Their solemn burial service was performed, and then the members took their sad farewell as they passed by the grave, dropping in a sprig of arbor vitae tied with a blue ribbon His brethren of Neshaminy Lodge of Odd Fellows of Hulmeville, attended in large numbers, and dropped in the grave a sprig of evergreen

—On Friday night last there were more robberies The Cottage Hotel, and Jerry Kelly's store in the Third Ward, were entered, from the former some money, cigars and wine were stolen, and from the latter about $40 in money Attempts were made also to rob the stores of Charles Foster and Jacob Hall The parties were plainly seen at both the last named places, but as there is no night police they got away without any trouble

☞ NO HOSPITAL NEEDED —No palatial hospital needed for Hop Bitters patients, no large-salaried talented puffers to tell what Hop Bitters will do or cure, as they tell their own story by their certain and absolute cures at home

☞ DR. C P. HOLL —To all who may be suffering from Diarrhœa, Dysentery, &c, I sincerely recommend the use of your Carminative Balsam For curative powers, it is without a equal. JAMES KELLEY,

4220 Paul St. Frankford, Pa

☞ HONORED AND BLESSED —When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, the most wonderful medicine was produced which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were sceptical, but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are

—One of the most remarkable robberies of the season occurred on Bath street, on Saturday night, at the residence of John Hibbs When the family retired for the night everything appeared to be all right and no thought was entertained of any danger from thieves The next morning however Mr Hibbs was surprised to find that every article of provision about the house, including a number of pies, and even the bread, was gone from the cellar where they were placed the night before His wife was consulted about the matter but could explain the affair by no hypothesis except robbery No traces of the burglars could be discovered and no place found where they had entered or left the house It was rather unpleasant to find the provender for the day gone, especially as the day was Sunday, but there was nothing to do but grin and bear it, and shower imprecations upon the robbers for stealing, and the borough for not having night police The despondency of the household may be easily imagined, and in the room of some boarders in the house the missing articles had not unexpectedly been found, the despondency would have lasted all day The culprits betrayed their guilt by uncontrollable laughter, but as the provisions was recovered undamaged, no arrests were made

—Would be robbers still roam around unmolested Last night three men were observed just after the shower of rain acting very suspiciously near H A Bailey's store One man made his appearance on the corner, and seeing the coast clear gave a whistle when two other men came down Dorrance street and went up to the building, evidently, to commence operations B F. Gilkeson heard the noise they made and called out to them, when they immediately ran down the street In three or four other parts of the town within the last few nights strange actions by suspicious characters have been noticed at unseasonable hours of the night Mr Conard's house has, twice since the robbery of last week, been visited by such parties

—Last Friday the annual examination of the Colored Orphans' School at Bridgewater took place It was conducted by State Superintendent J P Wickersham, assisted by Deputy Hauck After the examination, and the brief address by Dr. Wickersham, Mrs Dr Hunter expressed her deep interest in the school, after which Mrs Dr Hester, of Newtown, addressed the school Among the many guests were Mrs Dr. Hutter, lady inspector of the school, Rev J. Cunningham, D D and wife, from Bristol, and Mr Daniel H Ginn of Philadelphia

The thoughtful and discriminating portion of the public who purchase

READY-MADE CLOTHING

Will see with even but little consideration that the old house of Wanamaker & Brown is in a position to give superior advantages to its patrons These advantages consist in supplying goods that are

FIRST—PROPERLY MADE UP.
SECOND—MATERIALS SHRUNKEN.
THIRD—EXCELLENT IN FIT.

The cut and finish of our Men's and Boys' Clothing is of a character to outrank the Ordinary Custom Work.

We found out long ago by actual experience that garments bought up from the Wholesale Stocks are by no means so reliable as those made up under our own personal supervision Neither will the cut and general style (after wearing) bear a comparison to our own careful make. By making our own goods the

Producer and Consumer

Are brought in direct contact, and in consequence the latter reaps no small advantage

Boys' and Youths' Clothing.

This forms a very considerable proportion of our business, and we are satisfied that we can convince any one that we always offer the Handsomest and Best-Finished Goods known to the trade

LOW PRICES

Do not always mean good value On this head we shall only say that when Style and Quality are taken into account we are not, under any circumstances ever undersold, and seldom are the prices to which dealers fall as low as our first and only one fixed price to everybody.

Our Stock is Enormous,

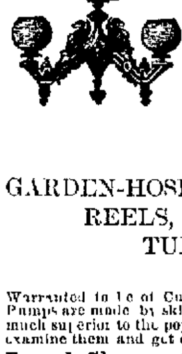

Especially in thin goods, suited to the present weather. Inviting a visit and recommendations from our friends,

We Remain, Very Respectfully,

The Grandin Farm near, Fargo, Dekota, is said to be the largest wheat farm on the globe. It embraces 40,000 acres, and is divided into four parts, with dwellings, granaries, machine-shops, elevators, stables for 200 horses, and room for storing 1,000,000 bushels of grain. Besides the wheat farm, there is a stock farm of 20,000 acres. In seeding time seventy or eighty men are employed, and during harvest 250 to 300 men. The product of one field of 2,315 acres is 57,285 bushels or some twenty-five bushels to the acre. The average yield of the wheat farm is from twenty to twenty-five bushels per acre, and it is considered that it is unequaled as a wheat region in the world.

Not least among the effects of the publication of Hamerton's "Life of Turner," (Roberts Bros.,) is the distinction of a great deal of that popular glamour which has so long hung round the utterances of Ruskin, the brilliant showman of the great painter. Mr. Hamerton's analysis of the author of "Modern Painters," shows very clearly his true place to be among the poets and not among the critics. He traces in the peculiar circumstances of the time, and particularly in the rudimental state of art culture, the cause of Ruskin's remarkable influence, and explains why a second Ruskin could not now repeat the successes of the first. The fame that shot up so suddenly and dazzlingly seems destined to an equally abrupt eclipse.

Heaven and God are best discerned through tears; scarcely perhaps are discerned at all without them. The constant association of prayer with the hour of bereavement and the scenes of death suffices to show this. Yet is this effect of external distress only a particular instance of this general truth, that religion springs up in the mind wherever any of the infinite affections and desires press severely against the finite conditions of our existence. Instead of slumbering at noon in Eden, we must keep the midnight watch within Gethsemane. We, too, like our great Leader, must be made perfect through suffering: but the struggle by night will bring the calmness of the morning; the hour of exceeding sorrow will prepare the day of godlike strength; the prayer for deliverance calls down the power of endurance. And while to the reluctant their cross is too heavy to be borne, it grows light to the heart of willing trust.

Herr Max Waldstein, of the Statistical Department at Vienna, says, in a recently published pamphlet, that the number of people in Europe who are upward of 90 years old is 12,831, of whom 9,203 are women. Of those who are over 100 years of age, there are 241 women and 161 men in Italy, 229 women and 183 men in Austria, and 526 women and 324 men in Hungary. There are in Austria 1,508,550 persons over 60 years of age, comprising 7·5 per cent of the whole population. It is found that the percentage of old people is much higher among the Germans than among the Slavs. In the German provinces of Upper Austria and Salzburg it is 11·5, while in Galicia it is only 4. In Hungary there are more old men than old women, which is explained by the fact that the excess of women over men is less in Hungary than in other countries. According to Herr Waldstein there are in Austria 100 women and 80 men who are 100 years old, 41 women and 37 men who are 101, and 88 women and 60 men who are upwards of 101 years of age.

SOMETHING SAVED FROM THE WRECK.—The scene was hereabouts; the characters, a rising young merchant and a pretty woman. He had an affection for her; she a liking for him, so they became betrothed. After a time she found out that she didn't love him well enough to marry him, and the match was broken off. It was a severe blow, and he staggered under it; but he fought well for himself, protested that his life was ruined, asked if she could not learn to love him, and in all ways did the proper thing. She was immovable, however, and he sadly and reluctantly took his leave. While his eyes were full of gathering tears he bade his faltering farewells, then closed the door upon his hopes. A moment later he opened it, stepped back into the room, and, with tears in his voice, brokenly murmured, "I hope this will make no difference about your coming to the store, Miss ——; and that your mother will continue to trade with us. I shall be happy to give the usual discount. Our stock is large and varied; our aim to please." And the door shut finally, leaving him alone with his grief.—Portland (Me.) Press.

MARRIAGE OF KINSFOLK.—The theory that the marriage of relations causes degeneracy has to encounter the facts of the preservation and remarkable persistency of the Israelites, and of the production of the fine breeds of horses, horned, and other domesticated animals, and it does not have all its own way in the experience of the human race in the present time. For example, when Gov. Magoffin, of Kentucky, recommended a law to forbid marriage of first cousins, the Rev. R. J. Breckenridge opposed it by the results of experience in breeding horses, by his own experience in marrying two of his cousins, and by proposing to demonstrate that the children of first cousins in Kentucky, where the practice of marrying cousins seems to have been extensive, were, man for man, the superiors of those that took this ground against such marriages.

He also referred to some examples of eminent citizens of Kentucky who were born of first cousins. We suppose that legislation to forbid marriages which would bring forth degenerate, not to say diseased progeny, would interfere very largely with marriages of what is called the divine instinct of love, and with marriages of interest. There are many marriages in which the result of children who will be inferior to their parents, not to say who will be a burden to society and to themselves, is far more certain than in the marriage of cousins in general. It might be well for parents to have some intelligence in this matter, and to try to impart it.—Cincinnati Gazette.

A man with a basket on his arm, pushed his way up to a fruit stand, yesterday, and said:

"How do you sell cucumbers?"

The dealer informed him.

"Why, man alive, do you suppose I want to buy a whole one?"

"I don't know what you want, but that's the price of cucumbers," replied the dealer.

"You don't want it all down, do you?"

"I do, for a fact."

"Suppose I give you one-third cash, balance in yearly payments?"

The fruiter shook his head.

"I'll pay you big interest," persisted the man with the basket.

Another shake of the head.

"Give you the best of security," urged the customer; "first mortage on unincumbered real estate."

The dealer would only shake his head.

"Well, then, how do you sell strawberries?"

Our reporter did not hear the price, but the man with the basket fainted dead away.
